Something of a grand title for a single boulder – an unusual boundary stone.

Parking and approach: As for Air Scar. After the wood follow sunken path beside the wall on the left. The easiest way is to strike up at the first runnel on towards the skyline. The boulder soon comes into view.

John Hunt on Boundary Arête.

Rowan Tree Crag

1/ Cross 5 Sit start. Slap into the carved cross and mantle.

2/ Estates Divided 6b The undercut end arête via an awkward throw from a sitter.

3/ Back to Buffy 5 Sit start. The front face of the end arête.

4/ Beating the Bounds 5+

The same start as 3 but trek rightwards across the face to the far arête.

5/ Presumption 5+

The obvious flake (without it much). Sit start from a low sharp hold.

6/ Boundary Arête 4+ * The arête. Sit start.

7/ Boundary Stone 2*

The uphill facing wall. Class from standing or sat.

8/ End Arête 2

Sit start. The left side of the end arête.

9/ End Arête II 3 The same on the right.

10/ No End 3+

Sit start, eliminating the arête holds.

11/ Plateau Traverse 6a+

Sit start at Cross and do the whole boulder. Harder at the start.
